

Lionel Fogarty

A deeply political poet, Lionel Fogarty is a leading spokesman for indigenous rights in Australia. Fogarty writes an innovative, passionate poetry, transforming the language and forms of Europe to resist its colonising force and, in the process, generates new connections between the Australian land, its people, and modern life. His books include Dha'gun Jabree Djan Mitti: The More Complete Works of Lionel Fogarty (Salt Publishing, 2008), New and Selected Poems: Munaldjali, Mutuerjaraera (Hyland House, 1995), Booyooburra: A Story of the Wakka Murri (Hyland House, 1993), Ngutji (Cheryl Buchanan, 1984), Yoogum Yoogum (Penguin, 1982), and Kargun (Cheryl Buchanan, 1980).

Lionel Fogarty's attendance at Poetry and the Trace Conference is supported by a Routledge ABES Travel Grant, and by the Centre for Postcolonial Writing at Monash University
