Some uncommon examples of sources and how to reference them

We have used just one of the many variations on the Harvard author-date style in this document. Be sure to adapt what you see here to your own referencing style.

Referencing format used here:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Book: Author/s date, title, edition, publisher, place of publication.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Article: Author date, ‘article title’, journal title, volume, issue, page numbers</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

Finding uncommon examples: on the internet

The most useful method of finding examples of uncommon references is to Google it. All universities provide citing and referencing pages which are open to anyone. However, you may need to look at several sites before you find a really tricky example. The sites listed below are well worth bookmarking.
