Summary

Appointed in July 2004, Philip is Director and Professor at the Centre of Policy Studies (CoPS), Monash University. He is also the Australian coordinator for the Economic Outlook taskforce of the Pacific Economic Co-operation group. Prior to his current position, Philip was Senior Research Fellow and then Director of Consulting at CoPS, having previously worked at the Bureau of Agricultural Economics (now the Australian Bureau of Agricultural and Resource Economics) and at the Institute of Applied Economic and Social Research (now the Melbourne Institute). He holds a Masters Degree and a Ph.D., both in economics, from the University of Melbourne.

Philip's main area of expertise is the application of large multi-sectoral and multi-regional economic models for policy analysis and forecasting. Since completing his Ph.D., he has been involved in the implementation of several large models of the Australian economy: a short-run macro model; the Australia-wide MONASH model; and the MMRF-Green dynamic model of Australian regions. Philip has also been active in developing models overseas. For example, in early 2000, he spent four months in Denmark at the invitation of the Danish government developing a dynamic multi-sectoral model of the Danish economy (Dynamic-AAGE). A follow-up visit occurred in the second half of 2001.

Philip has about 50 refereed publications covering topics such as: the prospects for industries, states and regions; the economic effects of import tariffs; the contribution of international tourism; the implications of APEC tariff liberalisation; the benefits and costs of major export projects; and the impacts of greenhouse-response policies for Australian regions. His articles have been published in a wide range of journals, including: the Journal of Policy Modelling, the International Journal of Forecasting, the Pacific Economic Review, the World Economy, Applied Economics, Economic Letters, Economic Studies Quarterly, the Asia-Pacific Economic Review, Economic Record, the Australian Bulletin of Labour, and the Australasian Journal of Regional Studies.

Over the past five years Philip has had primary responsibility for completing a large number of research contracts. His clients have included: the Danish Institute of Food Economics, the South African Department of Agriculture, the University of Pretoria, Insight Economics, the Allen Consulting group, CRA International, Acil-Tasman, PricewaterhouseCoopers, the Australian Greenhouse Office, the Productivity Commission, and the state governments of Victoria, New South Wales, Queensland, South Australia and Western Australia.
